Etienne Krug, Director of the World Health Organisation, says about their new study on cyberbullying: "Our children are spending more and more time on the internet; therefore, it is our duty to make the online environment safe".

At DIGIPRO, we take this task very seriously: it is the main objective of our project. Keep reading and visit our website to find out how we want to achieve it!

The App

Finally, we can proudly present you the last result... the DIGIPRO App! All partners have worked together to create a fun and educational game to continue our fight against bullying.

The main objective in developing the app is to promote co-education in schools and families and to test it. The activities in the game are meant to be done in the family home and at school. They are also a great opportunity to teach English in an innovative and creative way.

The students will follow the steps of our superhero through the day. They will be confronted with different situations, from meeting a new kid at school to bullying taking place right in front of their eyes. They will be given options on how to behave in each of these situations and thus train their empathy skills.
